These plants have been selected for their compact growth habit, reasonably low maintenance and flower power. Please see the symbol in the plant listings which indicates the variety’s suitability for the purpose.

The combinations are endless... we illustrate just a few of the varieties you could use to come up with beautiful displays in the garden as well as in containers, hanging baskets and bowls.

Plants are either available in our large trays of 128’s or 24’s, 4’s and selected varieties in individual pots.

Regretfully we cannot deliver pots or 4-paks but you are most welcome to visit our nursery. Availability is seasonal and not all varieties are available on a continuous basis – please call ahead to first check what’s available.

With townhouse gardening and smaller properties in mind, we thought it a good idea to highlight the plants in our catalogue that are particularly suited for use in containers, mixed planters and small gardens.

Plan to succeed...

- Plan your beds rather than just buying plants haphazardly.
- Start off by making a rough sketch of the garden, noting the size and shape of beds.
- Jot down whether beds are in sun, shade, or partial shade.
- Remember that there are very few plants that will flower in dense dark shade.
- Consider which colours you think would be the most effective for specific beds.

Now the exciting part - deciding which of all our superb seedlings are your favourites!

It is important that the correct quantities of plants are bought for each specific bed. Planting too closely is a waste of money and unhealthy for plants - but planting too far apart will give your garden a forlorn “brother-where-art-thou” look! A guide as to how many plants are needed per square meter is indicated with each variety of annual in our catalogue, but it is wise to buy a couple of extra plants in case of the odd fatality.

Gardens invariably have areas of light, partial and dense shade. It is very important to ensure your plants have the right conditions in your garden in order to thrive. Some plants are quite adaptable to a wide range of conditions. Others are very specific in their requirements.

SUNNY SPOTS & SUN LOVERS: Plants, which have a full sun requirement, means exactly that! If these plants get too much shade and not enough sun, they will perform poorly. They usually grow leggy, have weak stems, flop over and will flower poorly. Sun lovers need at least 6-8 hours of direct sun each day.

LIGHT SHADE: It occurs under large open-branched trees and consists of areas that receive soft, dappled shade for most of the day. There is no direct sunshine, but plenty of light. This is the easiest of the shady areas to garden.

SEMI-SHADE or PARTIAL SHADE: These are defined as those areas of the garden which receive some sun and some shade during the day. This is easy if the plants get morning sun and afternoon shade. Less easy is a spot in the garden that receives a patch of sun at midday only, for example a courtyard. The most difficult aspect in the garden is one that gets morning shade and afternoon sun – treat this as FULL SUN for all intents and purposes as shade lovers will roast in the afternoon sun, especially if close to a wall.

DENSE SHADE: Very little will grow in dense, dark shade. A canopy of evergreen foliage usually causes dense shade. If you want colour in such areas, you will have to have some of the tree’s branches removed professionally in order to allow more light into the area.

Off! with their Heads
Removing older dead flowers regularly will stop bedding plants from setting seed. This will encourage new growth, branching, more flowers and an extended flowering time, which will also give the bed or border a well maintained appearance.

Foliar feeding works well because fertilizer uptake via the leaves is much faster than fertilizer uptake through the roots.

Remember!
Compost and fertilize your beds before planting.
Most commercial composts contain a very low nutrient charge or food value. Compost alone is not enough. You need to add fertilizer or add kraal manure and bonemeal to prepare a bed. With the exception of a few bedding plants that like sandy soils, most bedding plants only perform well in soils that have been well composted.

Common Pests and Diseases
Aphids, Ants, Snails and Slugs, Cutworm, Mealy Bugs, Beetles!
Bedding plants that are grown in well-composted and fertilized soil, planted in the right position and watered properly, are normally healthy and free from disease, and are less likely to be attacked by insects. If any one of the above conditions is not met, the plants may become spindly, weak and highly susceptible to attack by fungi, viruses, bacteria or an assortment of nasty goggas: - Remember prevention is always better!

Pesticides and Insecticides: Remember pesticides can be harmful to humans and friendly insects if used incorrectly. Nu-Leaf encourages all gardeners to use organic pesticides and insecticides. Whenever you spray, read the label first and then follow the instructions. All pesticides and insecticides must be treated with respect.
